

ABSTRACT

Process for the preparation of Flecainide, its pharmaceutically acceptable salts and important intermediates thereof that involves the use of the 2-halobenzoic acid and its derivatives as a starting material. The use of this process also allows for the 5 synthesis of a novel intermediate useful in the production of Flecainide. This new process is an inexpensive and efficient process for the manufacture of these compounds.